QUOTA NOT REACHED.

Garrard County Must Not Fail. $130,000 Subscribed.

The Victory Liberty Loan which opened here last Thursday has not reached its quota in Garrard county and up to last night only $130,000 had been subscribed. The quota for the county is $198,050 and those who knew say that Garrard county must not and will not fail to go "over the top". These notes are the most attractive form of investment that the Government has ever offered. The interest rate of 4 3-4 per cent is the highest yet offered; the cerm of fori years and perhaps only three years to run, means that these notes are going to remain around par or perhaps go higher.

We created this war debt so let us pay it off. You paid the transportation across the sea for these boys who fought for the safety of your home and family, now its up to us to pay their way back home.

If you have been solicited or have not yet subscribed for some of these bonds, go to the headquarters in the office of the Chairman in the Court House or call at your bank and make your subscriptions.

The patriotism of Garrard county must and shall not die. Let's finish the job this week and keep GAR-RARD'S name on the ROLL OF HONOR.

NOTICE To Our Patrons

The management of the Bastin Telephone Company has been informed that the committee appointed by the City Council to prepare and present a franchise for its consideration will have its work completed and ready for the franchise to be read for the first time on Monday night, May 5. 1919. These gentlemen appointed to represent the people will have a contract to offer, we assume, that will be acceptable to the public and fully protect the public interest. The rates charged heretofore in Lancaster for telephone service have not met the expenses necessary to operate a telephone system although administered in the most economical way possible. This Company has lost money in its Lancaster business for a number of years and this loss has constantly grown and especially rapid since war conditions have caused the high price in telephone equipment of all

We state, without the fear of contradiction that the Bastin Telephone Company is the only telephone company in the State of Kentucky that has operated a telephone exchange for any length of time under conditions similiar to Lancaster for the small sum of one dollar per month for residence and business telephones. We think the just public of Lancaster now unanimously concede that any telephone company doing business in this City ought to have the right to charge fair and reasonable rates for telephone service and that this City and County should have a first class telephone system. This is impossible without adequate rates charged by the operating company. In fixing a telephone rate to be charged under this franchise the public and the officials of Lancaster will keep in mind that of all commodities on the market there has not been a larger increase in price in any in the past five years than in telephone equipment.

The Bastin Telephone Company will be a bidder for the franchise offered provided the rates are adequate to pay a reasonable return on the capital invested in the telephone business in Lancaster and Garrard County. The Company anticipates the experienced officials of the City fully realize the conditions of business now existing and will fix a living rate in the franchise offered. This Company will continue to give good service to its patrons as heretofore stated.

Hundreds of have been scattered over large areas.

> > Maps Are Not Complete.

With the maps now available, crosscuntry flying is a more or less, and in most cases more, dangerous undertaking. Ordinarily, clouds are to be found at altitudes lower than the to fly over territories unknown to the aviator. Frequently the pilot is unable to properly maintain a course above the clouds, and upon coming down below them he finds that he cannot locate himself on the map. It is then necessary to make a landing to ascertain his position, otherwise he might find himself much further of his course. If the field picked out for a landing does not prove to be a good one, a "crash" is likely to result. If a field cannot be found that looks good, the airman finds himself forced to land because of a shortage of gasoline.

It is therefore obvious that if various towns would provide a marking (numbers coinciding with those on a map being prepared, has been sugon his way toward a known landing

It is considered feasible to place a landing field in each county. This can be done with practically no expense. In nearly every community a pasture or meadow sufficiently large for a landing field is easily found. This field should be of firm and level turf, approximately 1,200 feet square (900 feet square might do if nothing better is to be had) and should be free from obstacles such as trees, houses, etc., in or near the field. What little work is to be done, such as clearing brush and small obstacles, will in most cases be volunteered by Boy Scouts' organizations. The marking of a landing field should be a large "T", which should be at least forty feet long by five feet in width.

Landing Fields Needed.

The designating numbers towns co-operating in this movement are asked to display should be fifty feet high when possible with no line less than four feet in width, in order that they may readily be seen from high altitudes. These numbers might be made from canvas staked to the ground, laid out in boards painted white, formed of white stones painted on the roof of a prominent building. If they be placed in the landing field care should be taken that they would not offer an obstruction to a safe landing.

During the present cross-country flights, messages are being dropped to the Mayor of each town selected as the feasible place for a designating point or a landing field, asking these officials to co-operate in this plan to make Kentucky the first State in the Inion to institute such a system of "aerial roads"

Whatever landing fields are prepared, or designating numbers displayed, the town will be visited by a phetographic plane, photographed and a landing made if possible. These photographs will be sent to Washingten, D. C., to become a part of a map showing every landing place in the country. Copies will also be presented to the town's officials for dis-

SOME NEW COLLAR FABRICS

Scrim of Coarse Weave and Chinese Silk Among the Decorations for Neckwear.

There was a time, long years ago, notes a fashion authority, when we used to wear high, stiffened collars of velvet and satin and silk. We considered those fabrics-velvet and satin and silk-quite the fabrics for collars in those days.

Then, when collarless frocks came in, we wore collars of white wash fabrics, organdie and muslin of various sorts. For, of course, though our frocks were collarless, they had col-lars just the same. That is, there were turned back and rolled over collars, even more important than the high ones that hugged and marred our necks used to be. So we ran along for years with collars and other sorts of neckwear of organdle and net and

Then, again, satin came into being as a neckwear fabric in first favor.

And now there are even some other unusual materials in vogue for col-

One is scrim, of a heavy, coarse weave, embroidered, which is used on some of the frocks of serge and satin. Chinese silk-that is to say, silk or satin much embroidered in the Chinese fashion-is another fabric now used for collars on serge frocks. Need-less to say, this doesn't mean that if you happen to have a bit of such silk on hand you can simply pin it deftly around the neck of your new blue serge frock and think you have a collar of the most up-to-date sort. No; but your dressmaker can use a bit of this silk for such a purpose by cutting it properly. And very prob-ably she will reiterate the same colors in some embroidery or other part of the frock.

METHODS OF APPLYING BRAID

Three Ways, Entirely by Hand, by Machine and by the Combination Plan.

There are three ways of applying braid or tape as edge trimming-entirely by hand, entirely by machine and by a combination of hand and machine work In each case care must be taken to "ease" the braid with the left hand as the work pro-ceeds in order to avoid shrinkage in wash material and puckering in silk or woolen goods. Braid invariably or woolen goods. shrinks in laundering more than other material.

When the application is to be made by hand alone, writes a correspond-ent, place the braid on the right side of the material close to the edge and backstitch the two together. stitching should lie very near the edge, but not near enough to cause fraying.

fold in half and crease the braid and hem it down on the wrong side of the material. The braid should just cover the backstitching on the wrong side and the hemming run close to it.

In the combination method the proess is the same except that the first stitching is done on the machine. In the machine work special care must be taken to keep the braid sufficiently lax. To do the work by machine alone fold the braid in half, place the material between the folded halves and baste carefully; then with one stitching on the machine in the three place to store his rubbishy stuff. He von't turn this place into a warehouse

I can tell you! Thus Abel Dallas, Dan Porter and Nat Wells. They were discussing their old bachelor relative, John Eristow, an odd, generous old fellow who had sold out quite extensive property hold-ings in Evenden and had gone to the Pacific coast to speculate. They had built high hopes upon his return, for Bristow was a natural born trader and had quite some capital. Naturally some one of them would inherit his fortune. Blasted anticipations changed to sullen disappointment after Bristow had made the rounds of their various homes, at the first a welcome guest. Following him came a lot of cases which he had temporarily stored in a local warehouse. Their contents were

oon revealed.
"I suppose," announced Bristow, "that I have brought back with me the finest and most complete collection of the flora of the Rockies ever gathered. I bought it from a man who had devoted twenty years toward assembling them. Thinks I, there isn't much I have done for my native town, and here's the opportunity to make a ten strike. What I'm going to do is to get at the collection, classify it, put it in permanent exhibition cases and present it to the public library for the enter-tainment and enlightenment of the community."

At which Abel secretly snickered, Dan anathemized the donation under his breath and Nat covertly sneered. The idea! The public library was a struggling proposition, poorly support ed and housed in small, gloomy quarters in the half attic of a rickety old store building.

The inevitable resulted. The Dallas, the Porter and the Wells families, finding that there was no opportunity of getting anything out of "the old fellow," began to turn the cold shoulder upon him. One by one the three families ceased their coddling tactics. He was no longer the honored, welcome guest and, one day when Bristow stated that he must find permanent living quarters and a place to keep his floral treasures, not a voice gainsaid his decision. It was while seeking his And colored muslins of various sorts new refuge that one day Bristow met were also used. Nellie Tracy. Her sincere greeting warmed his lonely heart. She was his half niece, had recently married, and invited Bristow to her home. There he met her husband, about as fine a young man as he had ever known. Both Arnold Tracy and his wife were nature lovers. The second visit resulted in Bristow taking up his quarters at their home. They apportioned to him two rooms, so he could have his collection ready at hand to arrange and cata-logue, making a minimum charge for the accommodation because they were really interested in his specimens and liked him, and nearly every evening took an honest delight in helping him in his work of classifying the floral

John Bristow was certainly an ardent devotee of his engrossing fad. He talked flowers to everybody, announcing that when Judge Pearsons returned from a visit to some relatives in the East, they would begin to plan as to getting the collection in charge of the public library. This Mr. Pearsons was an ex-judge, a great friend of Bristow, and had been the main mov-er in establishing the Evenden li-

Meantime the Dallas and the Porter ter and the Wells families barely rec-ognized the old man when they passed him on the street. Briston went about in shabby attire and they attributed this to a lack of money. They sneered at the kindly co-operation of the Tracys. They derided the philanthropic impulses of Bristow. There being no evidences that he had not exhausted his former means, they regarded him as unworthy of any consideration.

And one evening Judge Pearsons walked into the Tracy home and there was a great confab. He commended the worthy motives of the old man, and dilated upon the pleasure and the ed-ucation the floral collection would give to students and nature lovers.

"It seems a shame to place such treasures in the poor, common quarters we now occupy," he remarked.

"Oh! I wanted to see you about that," exclaimed the enthusiast in a lively tone. "You see, I've been wait-ing to have you help me plan out a new building for the library."

"A new building!" repeated the judge That's what I am going to do."

"But the cost-the money? "But the cost—the money,"
"Oh, I've got plenty for that," quite craftily chuckled the old man. And then he directed a queer, affectionate

The House Boat

By SADIE ESTELLE BALCOM

He was thinking of Theda Wayne as he walked along the shore of the great spreading river, and as he recalled the change a month had made in her, Albion Merton was truly sor-rowful. All the brightness of her nature seemed to have languished when her old father died. He had been a confirmed invalid, a great care to her, but the loving devotion she exerted through five years in his behalf had obscured all other interests. Then when the reaction came it seemed as though all the props of life were suddenly removed, and Theda collapsed like an overburdened being worn out and weary to the limit.

With the death of Mr. Wayne there expired the pension which, with what Theda could sell of their small garden produce, had kept their heads just above water. They did not own the little place where they lived. Theda could not hope to continue the lease and make a living, so she sold off the few poor sticks of furniture left, and went to an old maid relative who lived a mile down the river road, Lucinda Noves.

Miss Noyes was over 50, fragile and poor, had a small income from a trust investment, could scarcely afford to spare a room or a meal, but she volintarily proffered shelter to her half

"We'll manage some way, dear," she said. "It's crowded in these three little rooms I occupy, but we'll try to get along. You mustn't worry be-yond that for the present, child. You are so near a breakdown that it's a question if even nursing and rest will help you, but we'll try. For one good long month you mustn't lift your finger, not even think."

Theda smiled lists say and declared she would be all right in a day or two, but before the end of the first week in her new home she was in bed and likely to stay there for some time to come. The village doctor shook his head solemnly, and left some medicine and the grewsome de-

"Change of scene and climate, Miss Noyes, is all that will do Theda any

The gentle hearted spinster told Albion Merton of this with tears in her eyes. Albion was an independent fisherman and pearl gatherer along the Iowa shore of the great Father of Waters, owned a shack, some boats and a river equipment, and for a year Theda and her father. Mr. Wayne had been a great reader. Albion had an ambition for a better education, and the old man and his books became a great help to him. Then admiration, friendship and finally love for Theda had become a new allurement. He was a clean-minded, modest young felw. gave no outward evidence of his affection for Theda, but when Mr. Wayne died was a great comfort to Theda, for he took many of the cares of the occasion from her tired shoul-

Miss Noyes had told Albion of the doctor's report, and later as he went down the river shore Albion's clear face betrayed a deep anxiety. It seemed as though he must stand helplessly by and see Theda fade away, day by day. Like himself poverty bound her to an environment from which she could not escape. As to Albion even the meager living he was assured could not be risked through an experi-mental change. "No thoroughfare" the future seemed to read. Albion was immersed in despondent thoughts when a cry aroused him.

Three hundred yards distant an ordinary house boat was moored. On its deck a man of middle age, getting about with a crutch, was struggling to free himself from the grasp of a rough looking fellow whom Albion at once recognized as one of the numerous river thieves of the district.

The latter swung a heavy iron bar and dealt the cripple a terrific blow, and as his victim sank to the deck senseless, stooped over him to rifle his pockets. A shout from Albion caused him to hasten away with his booty. Then when Albion reached the stricken man all he thought of was his

It took two days nursing to bring Wade Burnham, as the cripple was named, back to normal condition. All the time Albion was his patient, helpful nurse. The grateful man on his way to a little truck farm he had traded for on the river below New Orleans, acquired a great liking for Albion. He asked him to join him and he would share his holdings with

It came about that Albion spoke of the offer to Miss Noyes. Then one day he could not resist telling Theda of his great love for her. From that moment a new joy came into her life. They were married and then began on on the floating h ing up at the pretty cottage that stood in the center of the Burnham farm.

"Oh, what a paradise!" murmured
Theda, as she stood upon the veranda of the beautiful home surrounded by flowers, and sunshine, and swee gan, never to pall or weary in that rare spot where beauty, and peace, and plenty were assured.

GRAZING LANDS

Alternate Grazing Not Practiced Much by Farmers on Account of Expense.

Spike-Tooth Harrow Less Likely to Loosen Large Pieces of Sod When Used Alone-Good for Distributing Manure,

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Alternate grazing as a relief for con-inuous grazing has long been recommended by experts, but little practiced by farmers. It involves the division of pastures so that each portion of the field may be given alternate periods of rest during the grazing season. Grass makes a maximum yield if allowed definite periods of uninterrupted growth. However, the extra expenses for fences and labor deter many farmers from following this system which, although it is adapted for practice in some sections of the country, it is not so favorable in others.

Disking and Harrowing.

Cultural treatment, such as disking and harrowing, are recommended where a sod-bound condition of the grass develops, as the slight mulching of the surface obliterates weeds and also improves the mechanical and physical condition of the soil. Genold for the worlds record price $3.16 per pound for the Red rowing, and unless the returns are is scarcely justified in thus treating his grazing lands, particularly if other work on the farm is competing for his attention at the same time.

The Spike-Tooth Harrow. The average disk will cut and turn sods to some extent no matter how nearly straight it is set, and on this account its use is often more detri-mental than beneficial. Ordinarily, in the case where the ground is inclined to be wet at the time of treatment, a be turned up, while if dry weather follows permanent injury to the pasture is quite likely to result. A spiketooth harrow following the disk usually drags the loosened pleces of sod some distance away, thereby leaving numerous areas of considerable size entirely bare. This happens more especially on slopes where a complete covering is difficult to maintain, even under the most favorable conditions. The spike-tooth harrow, when used alone, is less likely to loosen large pieces of sod than when used in conjunction with the disk. Its use during the spring over numerous small droppings from animals have fallen is beneficial in that it uniformly dis tributes this fertilizer.

FORAGE FOR HOGS OR SHEEP

Under Favorable Conditions It Is Ready for Pasturing in 50 Days From Seeding.

One of the best crops to furnish green forage for hogs or sheep is rape. It may be broadcasted on wellprepared seed beds at the rate of six to eight pounds per acre and covered with a harrow, or drilled solid, using five or six pounds, or in rows 24 to 28 inches apart, with two or three pounds of seed per acre.

The Dwarf Essex variety has proved the most desirable. It will furnish a very satisfactory ration for sheep and lambs alone, and when supplemented with grain is unexcelled for hogs. Under favorable conditions it is ready for pasturing in 40 to 50 days from seeding, and if not pastured too closely will furnish forage until freezing weather, the amount varying with the fertility of the soil.

McCombs Road Oil

From the time of the Roman Caesars it has been recognized that prosperity follows good roads."

THE high cost of material and the shortage of labor put a premium upon the preservation of present equipment; and for the preservation of good roads a gallon of oil is worth a bushel of labor.

Imperative demands of the war period have prevented adequate road maintenance, improvement and extension. The immense transportation problem of reconstruction requires that the arteries of traffic be kept in good condition.

Roads well oiled last indefinitely. A well-oiled road is impervious to the destructive forces of nature and offers adequate resistance to the wear and tear of heavy traffic.

A BROKEN LIFE

By ALLEN CHAMPNEY.

"Miss Cayenne, you said?"

"Yes."
"Why the peppery name?"

"You would know if you spent an evening in her company! Rightfully she is Miss Naomi Winters, but in a casual way the other appelative has become common. You may wonder at it, for she is not only beautiful but rich. Her eccentricities are constant and numerous, and young as she is they say she has a satire and sar star of an old Grecian pessimistic philosopher. Some deep disappoint-ment must have ruffled the fair surface of her life, for she is a consist-ent man hater and her apt ridicule of sham, pretense and affectation has not made her at all popular."

The speakers stood at a window of the lobby of the hotel at Walford, regarding a queenly appearing lady who was just passing by.

They casually discussed her and turned away, but a man of about thirty who had stood directly behind them moved closer to the window. There was something more than interest in his face—a token of deep emotion and a thoughtful expression were fn his eyes as he remained staring blankly out on the street. He had become Randal Paxton that morning. At the end of a protracted reverie he turned away with a deep sigh.

The lady who was the object of all this attention was life in harmony, to outward seeing, with the designation that had been awarded her. Her face, though smileless, almost severe, was perfect in its contour. Her eyes, which at times were scornful or haughty, when in repose bore a half-hidden sadness that told of some secret sor-

A storm of censure and disapproval greeted her when she selected Alice Wade as her maid. A member of a family poor, obscure, the father of was a drunkard, herself a deserted wife, Alice had been shunned, With rare human pity Miss Winters took her up, lifting a depressed soul from gloom to sunshine and winning a devotion and love that was almost pathetic.

It was Alice who knew of countless deeds of charity done by her mistress in secret. It was she who knew that in her dark moody moments Miss Winters shut herself up in a room never visited by others. It was Alice who knew that her young mistress had loved and lost, embittering her

"It's me, my pretty, your roving, unfortunate husband. I hear you've got a job where there's lots of money and wels. You've got to get me some.

"I wouldn't give you a penny if you were starving!" protested Alice and broke away. The man started after her. Paxton intervened, knocked him eless with a single blow, and husried the girl homewards.

"There, you are safe," he said, "and if that miscreant troubles you again just call the police. Why! what is that?" as a thunderous sound emanated from the house, startling, alarming.

"Something has happened. Oh, my young mistress!" palpitated Alice, and she rushed into the house, followed by Paxton. Into the wing room Alice dashed. At its threshold for an instant Paxton paused. CAPS ARE NUMEROUS Give Protection From Rain and Reduce Loss of Leaves.

One of Strongest Recommendations le Fact That Growers East of Mississippi River Are Enthusiastic Over Their Use.

Hay caps-covers used in curing hay in cocks—give protection from rain, reduce the loss of leaves, improve the color and increase the feeding value of the hay. One of the strongest recnendations for the use of hay caps is the fact that hay growers east of the Mississippi river who have used them are nearly always very enthusiastic regarding their advantages. The chief reason hay caps are not used extensively, both North and South, is that most hay growers are of the opinion that they cost too much to warrant their use. In many sections

the reduction in the value of hay through discoloration by sun and rain in a normal season amounts to as much as, or perhaps more than, the cost of enough hay caps to prevent this

Hay caps are of two distinct typesthose that are entirely impervious to both air and rain, and those that shed nearly all of the rain, and at the same time allow most of the moisture-laden air from the interior of the stack to pass through and be carried away. The caps are fastened on the hay cocks by weights attached to each corner of the cap and buried in the hay, or by use of strings tied to each corner of the cap and fastened together near the ground on opposite sides of the cock. Caps should be put in place as soon as the cock is made, but when there is no indication of rain this may be delayed until the following forenoon. When the caps are not in use they should be dried thoroughly and stored. If properly cared for they will last several seasons, and can be used on three or four cuttings each season

At the New Jersey experiment station it was found that when some cocks of alfalfa were covered with cotton sheeting caps 45 inches square and exposed to a heavy rain lasting 24 hours, the hay was damp only two or three inches below the top. The cocks that were not covered received a thorough wetting and the hay was more or less bleached, the stems brittle and the loss of leaves heavy.

Hay caps are especially valuable in-curing alfalfa and clover hay which do Alfalfa hay must be handled carefully to avoid loss of leaves which constitute from 40 to 60 per cent of its weight. Farmers making a specialty of produc-ing choice hay for market, or feeders, such as dairymen, desiring good palatable hay free from dust, will find that under certain conditions it will well to cure hav in cocks, u hay caps, when ordinary methods have been found to be unsatisfactory.

HOW TO HANDLE SHEEP

To lead a sheep, stand on the left side, place the left hand under the lower jaw and the right hand on the dock or tail. Press on the dock and the ani-mal will move; the left hand is used to guide it. Dragging sheep is hard on both man and sheep.

To carry a sheep, stand to the rear and on the right side; place the right hand just back of the right front leg and underneath the brisket. Gently raise the front end of the sheep from the ground. Grasp the left hind leg at the hock, using the left hand, and lift the sheep. Struggling Struggling will be prevented in this way.

Earlier Planting, Better Yields

When large ensilage varieties from Virginia or Missouri, for example, are planted in northern states late in May they make a rapid, long-jointed, tender, succulent growth, and are so gree when fall frosts occur that they are heavy to handle, low in feeding value and too sour. But when planted in April, or very early May, they make a slower, hardier growth, better with spring frosts and summe condition of maturity and produc more grain than when planted late Fall frosts, not spring frosts, are mos to be feared.

STUFFED UP WITH "A BAD COLD?"

Get busy with a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery at once

Coughs, colds and brouchial attacks—they are all likely to result in dangerous aftermaths unless checked in time.
And how effectively and quickly Dr.
King's New Discovery helps to do the checking work! Inflamed, irritated membranes are soothed, the mucous phlegm loosened freely, and quiet, restful sleep follows.

Constipation Emacipation No more lazy bowels, yellow com-plextion, sick headache, indigestion, embarassing breath, when you use as a corrective Dr. King's New Life Pills. They systematize the system and keep he world looking cheerful.

Keep Children Erect.

To make a child maintain an erect position while writing at a school desk German has invented a rod to be attached to a desk, terminating in a cup against the child's chin.

About Bathing.

Frequent bathing is conducive to good health as well as comfort. It keeps the pores of the skin clear, so that they can perform their proper function of clearing the system, through the skin, of excretions which

"AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH

A POUND OF CURE" IS AN OLD SAYING

Germs from decayed teeth and unhealthy gums cause many diseases of the body. Rheumatism, heart and stomach trouble are but a few of the Clean teeth and healthy gums prevent these troubles.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO NEGLECT YOUR TEETH?

You would not eat tainted or decayed food. Yet with decayed teeth and diseased gums every bite of food is tainted, and in time your health pays the penalty.

One of the first questions your doctor puts to you is: How are your teeth?

Uncle Sam put thousands of dentists into service, because he realized the importance of caring for the teeth. Every soldier had to use a tooth-brush.

Make up your mind to-day to have your teeth examined and put into good condition. High class dentistry isn't necessarily expensive. When you decide to have your dental work done come to me first. I will examine your teeth and tell you what you need and what it will cost. I make a practice of saving teeth. You will get the best work and materials at very reasonable prices.

Tiny Circles and Squares Add to Attractiveness of Gowns, Hats, Slippers and Bags.

Of course everyone has noticed by his time that beads are just as much we vogue this spring as ever. Beads here are on hats blouses gowns and this time that beads are just as much the vogue this spring as ever. Beads there are on hats, blouses, gowns and evening slippers, besides "purse bags" are still much beaded, and we wear beads around our necks, notes a correspondent.

Two patterns of beads much used on georgette blouses and frocks that very easy to copy are the round square designs. The round deand square designs. signs are merely circles of beads of some effective contrasting color, such as white beads on a coral fabric, or black beads on yellow, that are sewed on tunics in circles about as large as a saucer. Sometimes a bit of em-broidery—wool or silk—is applied as a motif inside a circle.

The square pattern is developed ex-E. D. Cooley, Cartersville, Ky tensively by the use of the shiny cylindrical beads about half an inch long. These are applied in a very simple, large plaid to whole dresses or tunics or blouses. Sometimes just a two-row border crosses in a plaid at the

At the end of seven months John Darlow discovered this mutual devotion, flercely or-dered Marsh out of the house and nearly broke Celia's heart by that act. Cella eloped with Marsh, and from a town seven miles distant wrote a beseeching note asking for the pa-rental blessing and forgiveness,

There came back a scathing, scorchng reply. Forever, it stated, she was shut out from heart and home. Neither she nor the man she had wedded without permission should ever darken the door of Sevenoaks again! More appeals, more bitter and definite r plies, and Celin knew that she had east in her lot with Marsh for good.

Seven years passed by, unforgiving and lonely for John Darlow, full of life, variety and bliss for the wedded pair. Tender, considerate, loving, pair. Tender, considerate, loving, Marsh had never given Celia cause to regret marrying him, except for sor-Celia was supremely content.

Marsh, it seemed, before coming to Sevenoaks had been a member of circus troupe. He was a gymnast with a peculiar talent. This was the abil-ity with lightning swiftness to hang. twist and swing from one trapeze bar to a series of others placed at various distances. His act was a star one and liberally paid for. When he had applied at Sevenoaks for work it was after a fit of illness and out of the circus season.

Marsh followed his unique profes sion only four months in the year. The first season Celia accompanied him, and added to their store of savings by taking charge of the wardrobes of the members of the troupe. The second year there was a baby, the third year Marsh had accumulated sufficient to purchase a pretty bungalow with several acres set in small fruit surrounding it.

Then began an ideal existence for the happy pair, still lovers. Marsh was at home eight months of the year. Two new babies came along and health and harmony made the time fly swiftly. Upon each recurring birthday of her father Celia wrote him a loving note, but no attention was paid to

It was the anniversary of their wedding day when bad news came to them. Sevenoaks was 200 miles away, but Marsh got out his automobile and started on the long trip without losing a moment. A telegram from a physician had apprised Cella that her father was dangerously ill. When they reached the old home a nurse told them that Mr. Darlow was unconscious, and after they had seen the physician they knew that the patient had seen his best days.

"His trouble may wear off with ime," the doctor said, "but he may be an invalid for many months." There was a serious consultation and Marsh took the responsibility of removing his father-in-law to their own home.

Marsh had to go away on business and it was with eagerness and expectancy that he returned at the end of a week. Celia had written him that her father was improving, that he had even been able to come out into the garden in an invalid chair, but that his mind seemed still clouded,

One by one he picked them up, and one by one as he had them he hung them all in a row upon the lower limb of a tree, suspended by toes, knees and hands. They filled the air with stri-dent mirth. Then Marsh struck an attitude and let them run up his planted knee, and behold! a human prepaid! At all this Lobe Conference pyramid! At all this John Darlow stared, agape. "Seven!" he breathed, bewilderedly. "What a family-what a man-not-not all yours, Celia?"

"Four we adopted, dear father—or-phans. They belonged to an old circus partner of Wylie."

"He's a good man!" murmured Dar low brokenly. "Tell him so. I've been a hard-hearted old reprobate! Tell him that, too!" And an hour later Cella and Wylie, reconciled to the ob-durate John Darlow, felt that their

"Note down every important event of each day," directed profound and systematic Julius Thurston, professor of philosophy at the Durham Institute. "At the end of the year go over it and sift out and preserve an epitome of the bearing of those incidents which have had an influence in building up

character and mental strength." "In other words, keep a diary! whispered madcap Blanche Deming to her close chum, Iola Vardaman, but the latter was covertly viewing the serious, interested face of Chester Mas-

She was the daughter of the local banker, he the son of a struggling farm er. He was masterful enough, however, to work his way through school, and was no burden on his aged par-ents. An uncle of some means had agreed to finance him as soon as he graduated, in starting him in as a lawyer, and there was no doubt among the professors that Chester Massey was destined to make his mark in the

It was a few days after that when Chester, entering the little stationery store near the school, found Iola there Their errands proved similar. Both had come to buy a neat, compact pocket tlank book following the suggestion of Professor Thurston.

"We seem to be on the same errand," she said pleasantly, and, as she received her purchase: "Do you know what my first entry is to be? 'This day Chester Massey patiently devoted en hour to construing my Greek for me and won me high marking."

"And I shall write that the most school honored me as helper and cheered me with her approbation," responded Chester gallantly.

As the weeks went by Chester and Iola saw a good deal of one another. Several times they met at little school and college functions and seemed to pair off naturally. At least once a week Chester was included in invita-tions to tennis and archery at the handsome Vardaman place, and the banker father of Iola took a decided liking to Chester when, incidentally in conversation, the latter modestly discussed the subject of trade acceptances with Mr. Vardaman, both being interested in the possibilities of that new discounting system.

A closer bond was cemented between the two young people through the fact that they graduated together, the highest in their class. The wealthy uncle of Chester was present at the exer-cises, and before he left Durham arranged for Chester to start into pro-fessional life in a good way. Chester lingered a week away from home amid a series of frolics and parties given the class. The last day of his so-journ in the village he invited Iola to row down the river. She accepted in her pretty, pleasant way, and his heart thrilled as he fancied she was scrrowful over his prospective departure, and told him frankly she would miss him. A certain sense of sadness oppressed both as finally, shipping the oars, Chester allowed the boat to drift at will. They were each silent, a conscious restraint affecting them as they realized that parting was soon to come. Then suddenly the boat veered past an Island that divided the stream

"We must get ashore, and quickly!" he spoke. "Without oars we should soon be in peril." Iola uttered a cry mean to be deterrent, but the next moment throwing off his cont. CONTROL SWEET

Industry May Be Seriously Jeopardized Unless Right Measures Are Adopted.

HEAVIEST LOSSES IN SOUTH

Pest Is Spread Mainly by Commercial Movement of Crops-Has No Natural Enemies So Far Known -Control Measures.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Unless rigid control methods are practiced to prevent the spread of the sweet-potato weevil in the Gulf states, America's sweet potato industry will be seriously jeopardized. Last year $3,500,000 worth of sweet potatoes of the Gulf country were destroyed by the weevil. Texas, Louisiana and Florida growers suffered the heaviest losses, while in other sections of the South the crop was damaged from 25 to 50 per cent.

The sweet potato weevil, a small, snout-beetle, red and blue in color and antlike in appearance, bears the same relation to sweet potato production that the boll weevil does to cotton. The female weevil lays her eggs in the vines, and in the stalks or crowns near the ground, and also on crowns near the ground, and also on the roots in the field and in store, continuing to work and breed in the roots in storage. The larvae, on hatching, tunnel through the vine to the roots, the vines die and frequently the roots become badly riddled and filled with excreta, giving them such a bitter taste that even swine will not eat them. Present knowledge indicates that the pest is spread mainly by the commercial movement of the sweet potato crop, as the weevil, al-though winged, travels very slowly in spreading infestation.

Control Is Difficult.

So far as is known the sweet potato weevil has no natural enemies. Its control would be comparatively simple through extensive quantities in the producing sections were it not that the pest also breeds on morning glory and bindweed. Control measures include the cleaning up of all old sweet potato fields by destroying all the vines, stems, tubers and other remnants.

Then the ground should be deeply plowed and kept free from volunteer sweet potato and morning glory vines

All sweet potatoes should be gathered and divided in the field into three lots: (1) weevil-free tubers, (2) roots slightly infested for fumigation (3) roots badly infested. The third class, or culls, with all remnants of an unsalable nature should be gathered and fed to hogs, cattle, or poul-try after cooking them to insure that no weeven may escape to extend the infestation. If the potatoes are unfit for feeding to live stock they should be burned with the aid of straw, dried weeds, paper or oil.

Crop rotation is an effective control measure. Indeed, injury to a large extent is preventable where care is in the selection of the potato field for future planting. The new fields should be as far as possible from old sweet potato fields which have been infested and if possible should be separated from it by a natural barrier, such as strip of woodland or such a crop as corn, tobacco, or Irish potatoes new crop should also be planted at a distance from the seedbed. One grow-er reports a decrease from 75 to 5 per cent annually in his sweet potato loss since he has practiced this method.

Potatoes which are not badly in-fested may be fumigated to advantage, where they are intended for early con-sumption. Carbon disulphid has been successfully used for this purpose. Under unfavorable conditions, however, fumigated roots may fail to g minate or sprout or may become su ect to rapid and complete decay. This occurs especially where the tubers show a high moisture content.

Arsenical Spray Is Favored.

Before sweet potato plants are set out in the spring, it is advisable to dip them in a solution of one pound of lead arsenate dissolved in ten gallons of water. Spray the plants with arsenicals for the first appearing weevils on leaves and stems. Construct all on leaves and steas. Construct an storage pits at points remote from the sweet potato field. They should be kept as dry as possible and should be constructed as to allow for fumigaconstructed as to allow for fumiga-tion and to permit of inspection from time to time for weevil attack. All farmers of a section should co-operate in the eradication of the sweet potato weevil, as such work is for the com-mon good of the community. In fact, to accomplish effective and persistent results combined community effort is necessary.

POTATO WEEVIL KHAKI COLUMN

Through the kindness of his father, Mr. R. H. Tomlinson, we are permitted to publish this letter from his son, Robert, Jr., which is interesting and will be read eagerly by his friends here.

"April 1st, 1919, Monaco, Dear Pop:-

This is the prettiest place on God's beautiful footstool I do honestly believe, never saw any place so pretty in all my life. All the buildings are of stone, and usually of a pale pink, with green tile roofs. All of the trees in full bloom and the oranges, lemons and figs and olives are bearing the trees down to the ground.

The Casino, which you know is the greatest gambling place in the world is too gorgeous for words, with its rich hangings and gold embossed furnishings. Then the Prince of Monaco's Palace is certainly a place fit for a king. I went thru King Georges palace while in England but it cannot hold a candle to the castle of the Princess here.

Then too, the Mediterranean is beautiful, changing colors at almost every incoming breaker. Have been on some of the peaks of the Alps and have seen some of the snow capped ones. If I was a millionaire, I think that I know now where I would live from now on, but you know that they comprise almost the entire population of Monte-Carlo, as there are no industries or anything of the sort in the little province, of course they grow fruits but that doesn't afford any great amount of labor.

I am going for a little trip into Italy tomorrow I think, I want to see all the country possible while I am over here.

Don't know any news. Hope ali the family are well. I am feeling fine. Give my regards to all. Lots of Love,

Pens made of feathers were common in the seventh century, but so inveterate was the old habit of writing with reeds on parchment and paper that it continued a long time after the first use of quills. The custom of carrying a pen behind the ear is ancient, as may be seen in the life of St. Odo: "He saw a pen sticking in his ear in the manner of a writer."
